

2023 FCAME Mortuary Price Survey

This survey of funeral establishments in Maryland, Delaware, and the District of Columbia was conducted in 2023 by the Funeral Consumers Alliance of Maryland and Environs (FCAME). We surveyed the least expensive options: direct cremation and immediate burial. Information was taken either from a funeral establishment’s General Price List (GPL) or over the phone. Prices are subject to revision at any time and may have changed since our information was obtained.

While many consumers might not choose direct cremation or immediate burial, the Federal Trade Commission requires that they be offered by every funeral establishment as options. So they make a good points of comparison in determining the relative cost-efficiency of funeral service providers.

Inclusion in this survey does not constitute any endorsement by the FCAME. We attempted to obtain price information from every funeral establishment we had knowledge of in MD, DE, and DC. If we were not able to obtain the information we made note of that in a footnote.

We list the least expensive option for DIRECT CREMATION. This does not include a cremation container (in most cases) or an urn. They generally do not include the crematory fee unless otherwise noted below. See the notes after the data table for more specific information about what direct cremation typically entails.

We also list the least expensive option for IMMEDIATE BURIAL This does not include caskets, vaults, burial plots, costs associated with opening and closing a grave, monuments, or services of any kind, except as noted. See the notes after the data table for more specific information about what immediate burial typically entails.

Footnotes are explained immediately beneath the table below. This data is arranged alphabetically and organized according to county, with Maryland counties followed by Delaware counties and then the District of Columbia.

Footnotes

(SCI) Owned by Service Corporation International, a large national chain of funeral homes and cemeteries.

(1) Includes the crematory fee.

(2) May or may not include the crematory fee – you should call to find out.

(3) May include a simple graveside service.

(4) Prices can be found on the establishment's website. (NOTE: Other funeral service providers may be adding this information as time goes on so it's a good idea to check the websites of the establishments you are interested in.)

(5) Similar to an immediate burial plus religious preparation.

(6) We were not able to obtain information from the funeral service provider.

Direct Cremation - more details

The price quoted in this survey is the price listed on the General Price List (GPL) of a funeral establishment as “direct cremation with container provided by purchaser” (unless noted otherwise) meaning it does not include the container in which the body is cremated. This is the base price, to which the cost of any cremation container, whether it is purchased elsewhere or from the funeral establishment, must be added.

The direct cremation price quoted typically includes:

- transportation (within a reasonable distance) of the deceased to the mortuary and to the crematory;
- the costs (basic services) of the funeral director and staff;
- securing of all necessary permits and authorizations (except as noted below);
- return of the cremated remains to the family in a simple, temporary container either by mail or by having the family pick them up at the funeral establishment.

The direct cremation price typically does not include:

- the use of facilities for viewing, either at the funeral home or at the crematory;
- the crematory fee (unless otherwise noted in a footnote);
- an urn to store the ashes long-term, the cost of which varies greatly, but may be bought elsewhere.

You should always inquire about whether there are any additional fees, such as the medical examiner’s fee for approval of cremation if the death occurs in DC, and the courier’s fee for obtaining it. There is also often a surcharge for heavier bodies and for transporting bodies long distances.

Cremation containers (the container that the body is cremated in) can be costly. However, funeral establishments are required by the Federal Trade Commission to offer a relatively inexpensive “alternative container” for cremation. The least expensive one offered by any given establishment varies from a simple cardboard box or canvas or vinyl pouch, to a more elaborate one costing several hundred dollars. If an establishment does not offer one of the simplest, least expensive containers for cremation, you could purchase one elsewhere and use it if you prefer, if it conforms to the requirements of the crematory. In general, the establishments that charge higher prices for direct cremation are less likely to offer the least expensive types of cremation containers but might be willing to do so if asked. It pays to call and find out.

Immediate Burial - more details

The price quoted is the price listed on the GPL as “immediate burial with casket provided by purchaser.” This is the base price, to which the cost of a casket, whether it is purchased elsewhere or from the funeral establishment, must be added. There may be other charges not explicitly mentioned in the GPL.

The price for an immediate burial includes:

- transfer of the deceased from the place of death to the mortuary and to the place of burial;
- the costs (basic services) of the funeral director and staff;
- securing of the necessary authorizations and permits; and
- minimal preparation of the body for purposes of identification only.

The price for an immediate burial does not include:

- embalming;
- additional preparation of the body;
- the cost of a cemetery plot, opening and closing the grave, a liner or vault, any marker or monument; or
- any ceremony, visitation, or public viewing. A few funeral homes may be willing to include a simple graveside service for a few family members with or without clergy.

The minimum casket offered by a funeral home is most often cloth-covered wood or fiberboard, which can cost less than $1000. Some offer a plain pine box for about the same price, but some offer nothing less than a steel casket costing more. Most caskets are priced between $1500 and $8000, but they may range in price up to more than $100,000. Details on casket prices are not found on the GPL itself but in a separate casket price list. The Federal Trade Commission's Funeral Rule requires funeral establishments to offer a prospective purchaser the casket price list as soon as caskets or alternative containers are discussed, before the caskets are actually shown. Families are free to purchase a casket elsewhere. Funeral providers are forbidden by the Funeral Rule to charge more for their services if a casket purchased elsewhere is used. Some funeral homes are willing to provide a less expensive casket than is listed on their GPLs when requested to do so. It pays to call and find out. Most cemeteries require a vault because it makes cemetery maintenance easier.

For green burial, a simple shroud, wood or other biodegradable casket is used, without a vault. You should find out what options for a green burial container a funeral establishment provides, or obtain one online or elsewhere.

Additional Considerations

You should call to find out the specifics for any establishments you are interested in. Although the prices quoted here do not include ceremonies, viewings, visitations, or items such as cremation containers, urns, caskets, or other burial merchandise, there remains some variation among funeral establishments in what is provided for either direct cremation or immediate burial. Variation in price can be attributed to overhead for buildings, staff, and amenities that may be valued by some buyers, but not by those looking for more cost-effective arrangements.

You should also be aware that these prices do not include discretionary items such as multiple certified copies of death certificates, which are generally required to manage the estate of the deceased. These prices also do not cover obituaries, flowers, cards, or limousines. There may be extra charges if a separate trip must be made to obtain a death certificate. Many funeral establishments will hold a body for only a short period –as little as 6 to 24 hours – before adding charges for sheltering or refrigeration, which may run between $75 and $150 or more per day. Often such charges will be incurred if the body must be held over a weekend or holiday. There may be additional charges for services provided on Saturday or Sunday or late in the day. There may also be additional charges for cremation or burial if the body weighs over a specified number of pounds.

Most funeral establishments have a website. We have included the website address in our survey when it was provided to us but if one is not listed for a given establishment you may be able to find it with an internet search. Many have photos of their establishments and staff and a few have extensive information including complete price lists and pictures of merchandise such as caskets, vaults, and urns. We have noted this when we have knowledge of that fact but were unable to verify this status for all establishments listed, and as time passes more may do this, so check to see if it is the case for establishments you may be interested in. We recommend you visit the websites of any establishments you are considering prior to visiting the actual physical facility.

Muslim and Jewish individuals should check with a spiritual leader where you worship to see if there are funeral establishments or cemeteries that have special arrangements to serve your respective spiritual community. For example, the Jewish Funeral Practices Committee of Greater Washington contracts with local funeral homes to provide immediate burial including a plain pine box for burial, and use of facilities for members of the committee to perform ritual Jewish preparation of and sitting with the body. It is available to members of the more than 40 synagogues that currently participate. More information can be found at www.jewish-funerals.org.

More information about funerals, burial and cremation, including many cost-saving suggestions, may be found on the FCAME website at www.mdfunerals.org.
